

Corporate Wellbeing Programme

Supporting Employees in a Digital World

Dr. Richard Hogan

Employee stress doesn't start at work - it starts at home

A growing number of organisations are seeing this play out across their workforce.

What is happening in families

- Smartphones, gaming, and social media are now central to daily life
- Ongoing conflict around boundaries and limits
- Sleep disruption and constant connectivity
- Growing concerns around online safety and exposure

How this is showing up at work

- Employees arriving at work already under pressure
- Distraction and reduced focus during the day
- Increased stress and anxiety
- Lower engagement and productivity

These challenges don't stay at home

They directly impact performance, wellbeing, engagement, and overall organisational culture

A practical, structured approach for organisations

- Expert-led by Dr. Richard Hogan
- Grounded in real family experience
- Focussed on practical application
- Designed specifically for working parents

What we deliver to organisations

- Live online sessions for employees
- Practical framework and tools
- Access to recordings and supporting resources
- Designed for real life application

Key areas covered

- Smartphones and boundaries
- Gaming and screen time
- Social media and mental health
- Online risks and safety
- Supporting families in a digital world

What organisations can expect

- Reduced employee stress
- Improved focus and performance
- Stronger wellbeing and engagement
- More relevant support for working parents

Programme options

Foundation

€2,000

A starting point for organisations

Core (Recommended)

€6,000

Structured programme for meaningful impact

Strategic

€20,000

Organisation-wide approach

Executive Briefing

Thursday 21st May at 2 pm

A short practical session for HR and People leaders

Register for Executive Briefing

Or learn more at www.parentingandtechnologyinstitute.com/organisations